It's not whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game.

Not only in sports but in a far more important game, the Game of Life, this old saying holds true. We, the SENIOR CLASS of 1953, have received our training for this game at Crosby. Now, as we leave to take our place in the world, we hope to play the game with faith, honesty and courage; for, "When the one Great Scorer comes to write against your name, He marks — not that you won or lost — but how you played the game."

DEDICATION

We, the Senior Class of 1953, dedicate this issue of the Keystone to Mrs. Marietta Packard to show our appreciation for the countless number of ways in which she has helped and guided our class as a whole and individually.

THE GAME OF LIFE

As we enter this game of life, we are playing in a period of uncertainty, confusion, conflict and change, where everyone is striving for recognition. Pausing for a moment to look ahead, we wonder what this game has in store for us. Will we be sure, immovable and steadfast as in the carefree days of our youth?

The answer to this question lies in our ability to make the most of the opportunities offered, for life is what we make it. The groundwork for this game is laid in our homes, churches, and schools. What we build on this groundwork is up to each individual to decide for himself. If we play this game with persistency, always clinging and spurring our efforts onward, we should not flounder, lost in this world of fear and unrest.

This preparation is a potter's wheel by which we shape our lives to better service. If we go through the first stage and come out complete, our lives will be objects of beauty and promise.

Now, at the close of our school years, when taking account of stock, we find in the profit column all the activities, recreation, studies, skills, beliefs, attitudes and better ways of living which help to build a more balanced life. On the debit side, however, see all the priceless moments, golden opportunities, and precious energy wasted. No matter how hard we pray, we haven't the power to restore lost time and opportunities. We sincerely hope that each underclassman will profit by our mistakes and improve his record, so that when the inevitable hour arrives for him to look back upon these years of training, he may find joy in the realization of fine work accomplished, satisfaction in the knowledge of goals achieved and great confidence in anticipating the future.

TRAINING FOR THE GAME OF LIFE

Life is an unending game of rivalry and competition — one faction trying to convince another that its ideals and standards are the best. We, as players, must be prepared to form intelligent opinions and produce sound judgments in order to decide what course to follow.

To do this, we must take advantage of a training which, consciously or not, we have been receiving for some years. For many of us, as seniors, that training has been completed, for our schools are the grounds where we practice, on a smaller scale, to acquire the perception we must have to take our place in world affairs and share its duties and problems.

Let us consider the responsibilities that we must uphold in these trying times. We must keep our faith in the ideals of America; we must be loyal to our country and defeat any danger that threatens to engulf our way of life. The free countries of the universe look to America for military and financial aid; they also look to her as a guide and are influenced by her actions. Whether they continue to follow our precedence depends on us — the youth who are ready to take a part in shaping a better world. That readiness goes back to our training in school — our lessons in tolerance, good sportsmanship, and understanding.

As graduation draws near, we can look back at our years spent here and offer God a prayer of thankfulness that we received our training for life's important contest in America — the only country in the world where everyone has a chance to be a winner.

"CAPTAINS

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

Much credit is due to the officers of the senior class for the good work done this year. Maurice Littlefield, our able president, has headed many projects for the class and for the Keystone. Sally Whitehead, vice president, and Natalie Bryant, secretary, have both done much for the class. Lois Whitcomb has been a competent treasurer and has done a good job of collecting class dues.

KEYSTONE BOARD

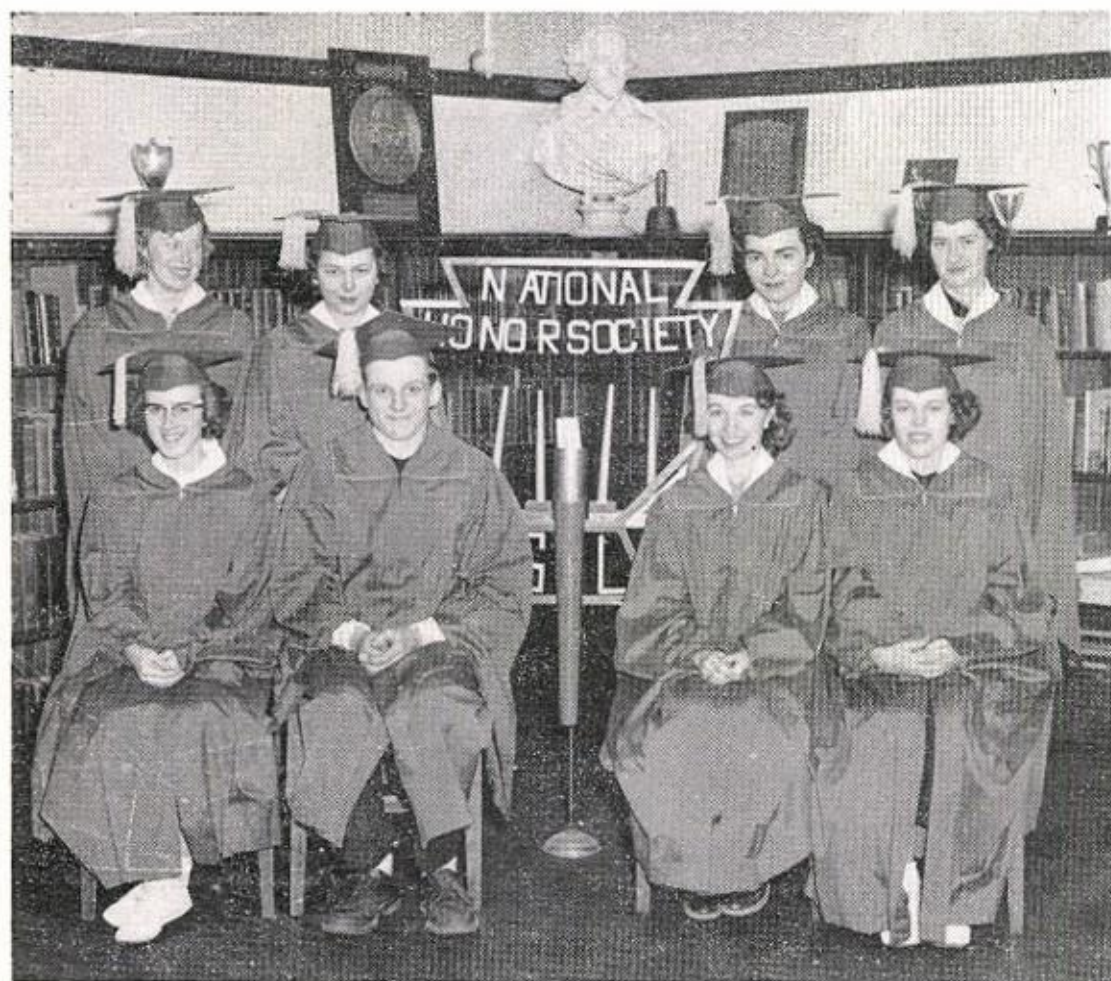

With the hard work of the editors and the guidance of our advisor, Mrs. Crone, the Keystone Board has been able to publish this yearbook for the class of 1953.

The Winter Carnival was sponsored by the Keystone Board to raise money for our yearbook. This money being added to that which was obtained from advertising has made possible this edition of the Keystone.

Greetings from the Junior Class! As we are nearing the last of our Junior year, we are looking forward to being Seniors who carry on the traditions of Crosby.

With the assistance of Mr. Hinckley, our class advisor, the class has sponsored various activities, including a food sale, Valentine Dance, and a Sadie Hawkins Dance.

Our class was well represented in football, basketball, and baseball. Gail Jones is the leader of the varsity cheerleaders.

The main event for us was the Junior Prom on May 15.

We all enjoyed working together to give the Seniors their final dance, the Senior Ball.

How time flies! It seems only yesterday that we were "little" freshmen, but we have our beautiful class rings to prove that we are sophomores.

The gym was decorated as a night club, Club "55," for our Sophomore Hop which proved to be a great success.

We have many sports-minded students in our class. Donald Greenlaw certainly can shoot those baskets. There are six sophomores on the Junior Varsity Basketball team.

Not to be forgotten, nine girls of the varsity team are from our class, and Cynthia Paul is leader of the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders.

We will always remember our sophomore year as one of the nicest.

As we came to school the first of the year, we thought of the ladder we were about to climb that will lead us through Crosby and into the future.

Our first task on this great ladder was to choose the above named class officers.

Different from other initiations, ours was a dramatic Indian pageant.

We are proud to have some of our boys on the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams, and three girls as Junior Varsity cheerleaders.

We look forward to meeting the challenge which the next three years will bring.

On September 17, 1952, the Eighth Grade held their first class election. The above-named class officers were elected at this meeting. Jean Shoules, Nancy Grady, and Wilbur Ames were our representatives in the Student Council. We chose Miss White as our class advisor.

The boys in our class, under the direction of Mr. Mansur, have formed basketball and football teams. Our basketball team was very successful.

The girls have a cheerleading squad and some of them are learning baton twirling.

We have greatly enjoyed our first year at Crosby and look forward to the next four years.

ACTIVITIES

Off The "Record"

Crosby - Players

FOOTLIGHTS CLUB

This year much work has been completed in organizing the Footlights Club as a major activity at Crosby. Plans have been made for the club to put on short plays with members of the Club doing both the acting and the directing. The officers are: President, James Gammon; Vice-President, Norma Bradbury; Secretary, Joan Woodbury; and Treasurer, Lois Whitcomb.

THREE-ACT PLAY

The three-act play Sparkling Sixteen was presented by the Footlights Club on Friday evening, November 14.

The play was directed by Mrs. Hester Crone, head of the English Department, assisted by Mr. Harold Doe.

The proceeds from the play were used for the Curtain Fund and for new stage equipment.

ONE-ACT PLAY

This year three one-act plays were given, one each under the direction of Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. DeForest, and Mr. Hall. The purpose was to stimulate greater interest in dramatics and, at the same time, to provide much pleasure for the theatre-going public. The Footlights Club was the sponsor of these plays and anyone interested in acting could try out for them.

PRIZE SPEAKING CONTEST

Every year Crosby students who are interested in public speaking compete in the prize speaking contest. Two winners are selected to go to the Lydia Spear Contest and two to the University of Maine.

Behind The Scenes

LIBRARY

Our school library may seem very busy and humming with work to a casual visitor, and so it is. The studious, and sometimes not so studious, boys and girls, who use the library daily, have many helpful reference books to use and to find the answers to many intelligent questions that pop into their young minds.

The library is well handled by a staff of student librarians headed by Gayle Lemont.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council has voted for many worthwhile projects this year, which we hope have benefited the school as well as the students. We try, as a group, to represent the whole student body to the best of our ability. The Student Council officers for this year are: President, Roger Smith; Vice-President, Patricia Perry; Secretary, Natalie Bryant; and Treasurer, Gail Jones.

CANDY SALES

Ring — there goes the bell marking the end of the second period and time for the five minute recess. Crosby students are ravenous after a hard morning's work. There are two attractive girls on each floor with a large assortment of candy that pleases all. So, after a candy bar to give them energy, Crosby students return to classes to tackle the rest of their day's work with renewed vigor.

RADIO CLUB

The Radio Club at Crosby is one of the oldest of its kind in the state. Organized in 1930, its purpose is to provide the members with instruction in code and short wave theory. Qualified members take the U. S. Government Amateur Radio Operator's Examination; upon successfully passing the examination are awarded licenses by the Federal Communication Commission.

OFFICE GIRLS

The office force consists of ten girls who are kept quite busy answering the phone, running errands, meeting visitors, typing, running off copies on the rexo-graph, taking letters, and other general office work. They do their part in helping to keep the school running smoothly.

CROSBY CRIER

A project, which was started last year and is being continued, is the publishing of the Crosby Crier, our school paper, which is published four times a year.

Two of the editions are to be compiled under the direction of Mrs. DeForest; the other two, by Mr. Doe.

A group of commercial students under the guidance of Mrs. Packard produce the paper.

Each issue shows the originality of the student body, and because of the enthusiastic response from everyone it has been necessary to increase circulation with each edition.

VARSITY CLUB

Mr. Soucy recently formed a Varsity Club. Any pupil who has earned a "C" is eligible to join. The members elected Keith Grant, President; Raymond Shibbes, Vice-President; Junne Knight, Secretary; Raymond Ebert, Treasurer. The Club was primarily formed for the purpose of promoting good sportsmanship and to raise money for athletics.

COMMERCIAL CLUB

For the first time in many years Crosby High has organized a Commercial Club. It has taken over projects to earn money to help pay for the mimeograph machine and other items for the Commercial Department.

The club officers for this year are: President, Joyce Wood; Vice-President, Gail Jones; Secretary, Natalie Bryant; Treasurer, Sandra Whitcomb; and Publicity, Joan Fitzgerald.

We Present

THE CROSBY REVUE

The Crosby Revue was formed three years ago under the very capable direction of Mr. Hinckley, with the assistance of several other teachers. The Revue is given by the more talented members of the student body. The show was so well received last year that we were asked to put it on in Brooks. We hope that in the future this will still be an annual activity for all to enjoy.

HI-Y and TRI-HI-Y

During the past year, a Hi-Y club for boys and a Tri-Hi-Y club for girls were re-instituted at Crosby after a lapse of about seven years. The Crosby P. T. A. is the sponsoring organization.

The primary purposes of the clubs are the same as those of the YMCA, with which they are closely associated. These purposes are to develop mind, spirit, and body.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE

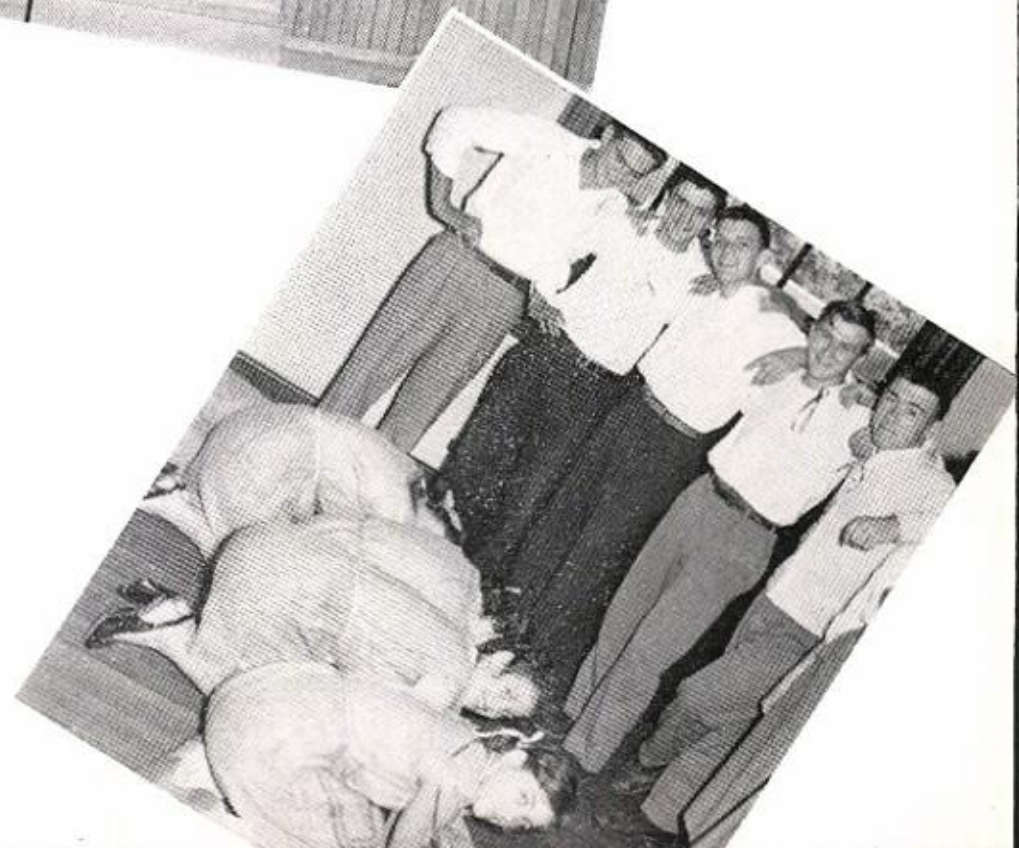

The Assembly Committee has provided the student body with a variety of interesting programs this year.

Guest speakers, including foreign students, business executives, government representatives, school administrators, and lecturers have been enjoyed by the student body as well as the excellently planned programs put on by the students.

FRESHMAN INITIATION

Help! Help! were the cries in Belfast on September 25. The city has been invaded by savages! But the people were not worried long, for they found these so-called wild people were headed for Crosby High School, not to become educated but to be initiated into the Crosby Tribe.

The big Crosby chief, Maurice Littlefield, dressed in full Indian regalia, after much entertainment from the new incoming tenderfeet smoked the pipe of peace with the chief of the Freshman tribe, Henry Gurney, and promised to live at peace with him and the members of his tribe as long as they would serve, honor and obey the senior members. This year, the Freshman Initiation was enjoyed by every student.

For Your Approval

SHOP

When school opened on September 3, a big change had been made in the shop. In fact, it was no longer in room 105, but across the corridor in 106 and 107.

We were pleased to see new benches, tools and two new sections for electrical and metal working.

Among the many nice things that have been made are: gun racks, tables, benches, and magazine racks.

GIRLS' GYM

A welcomed addition to our schedule this year was the newly formed Girls' Physical Education program, under the direction of Miss Beverly White.

Miss White had a fine schedule for the girls: during the fall, out-of-door games; winter, basketball and other indoor sports; spring, volleyball, soccer and softball. All the girls greatly enjoyed these classes and appreciate the new addition to their schedule.

PROJECTION CLUB

The Projection Club is under the guidance of Mr. Stanley W. Peterson, faculty member, with the very able assistance of Darold Dorr.

The purpose of the club is to learn the minor maintenance problems and operations of the audio-visual machines. The student projectionists are called upon during their study periods to operate these machines for teachers in presenting films and other audio-visual material to their classes.

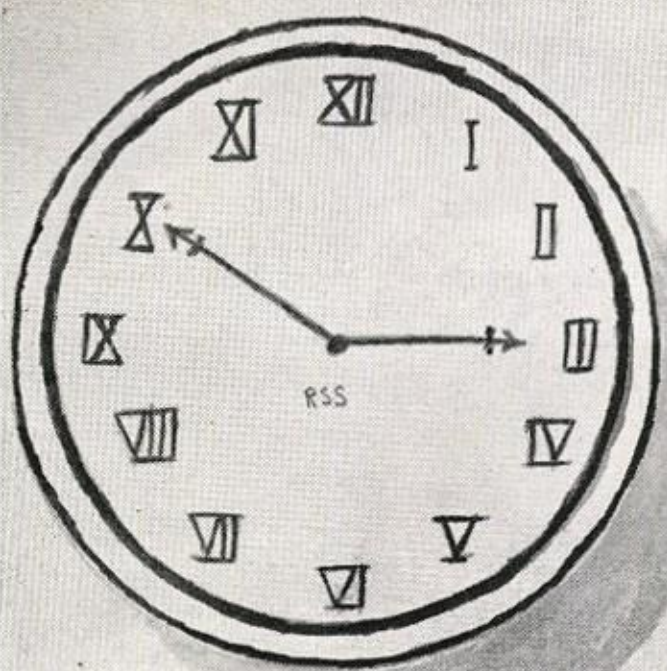

SCIENCE OF LIVING

Science of Living is a new course offered to all freshmen for the first time this year at Crosby High. Each individual boy and girl spent twelve weeks with the science, shop, and home economics teachers. Girls in shop learned how to use tools, how to make minor repairs on furniture and electrical wiring. In general, they studied many things of value for use around the home.

The boys in home economics class studied units in personal appearance, grooming, nutrition, some food cookery, and the science of living with himself and others.

This course will be accepted as one of the electives for college entrance and has been highly recommended by the State Department of Education for all students.

FOOTBALL

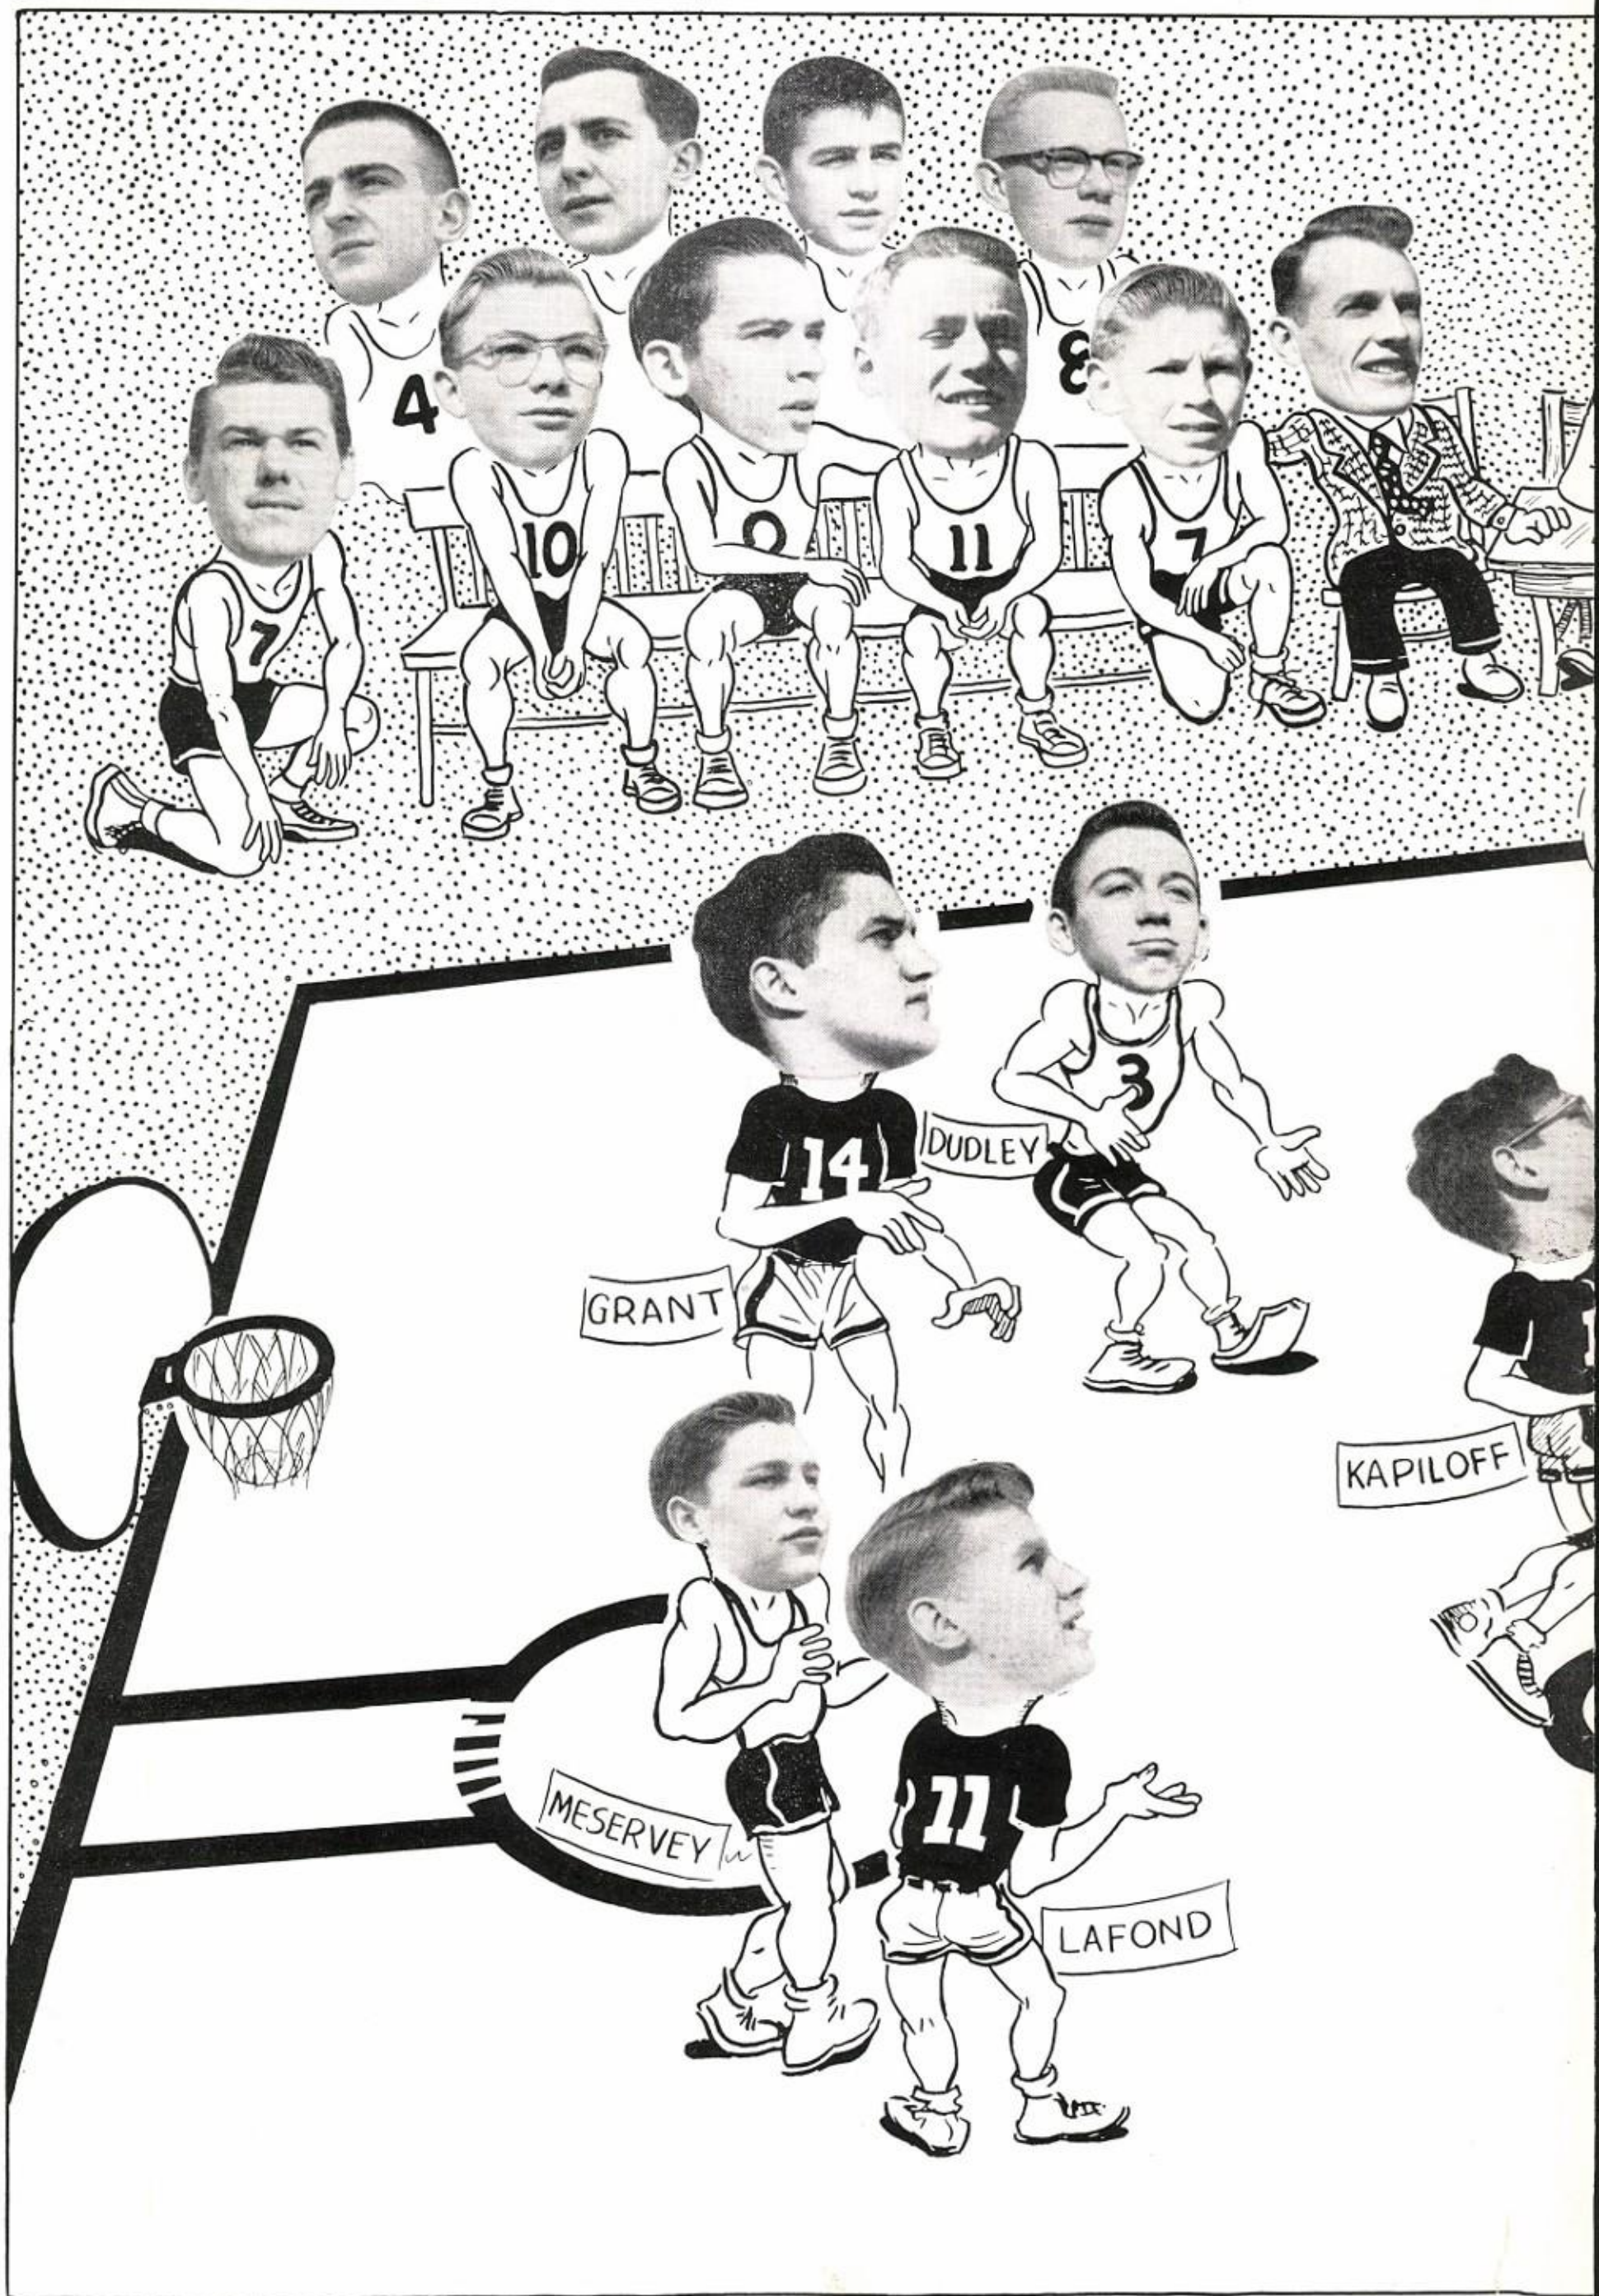

Football is a game of bumps and bruises, and the Lions received plenty of them this fall, playing such power-packed teams as Orono, Hampden, Lincoln, Greenville, Ellsworth, Bucksport and Bar Harbor. Six games were played in the Little Ten Conference. The Lions roared but couldn't manage to come out on top in any of them.

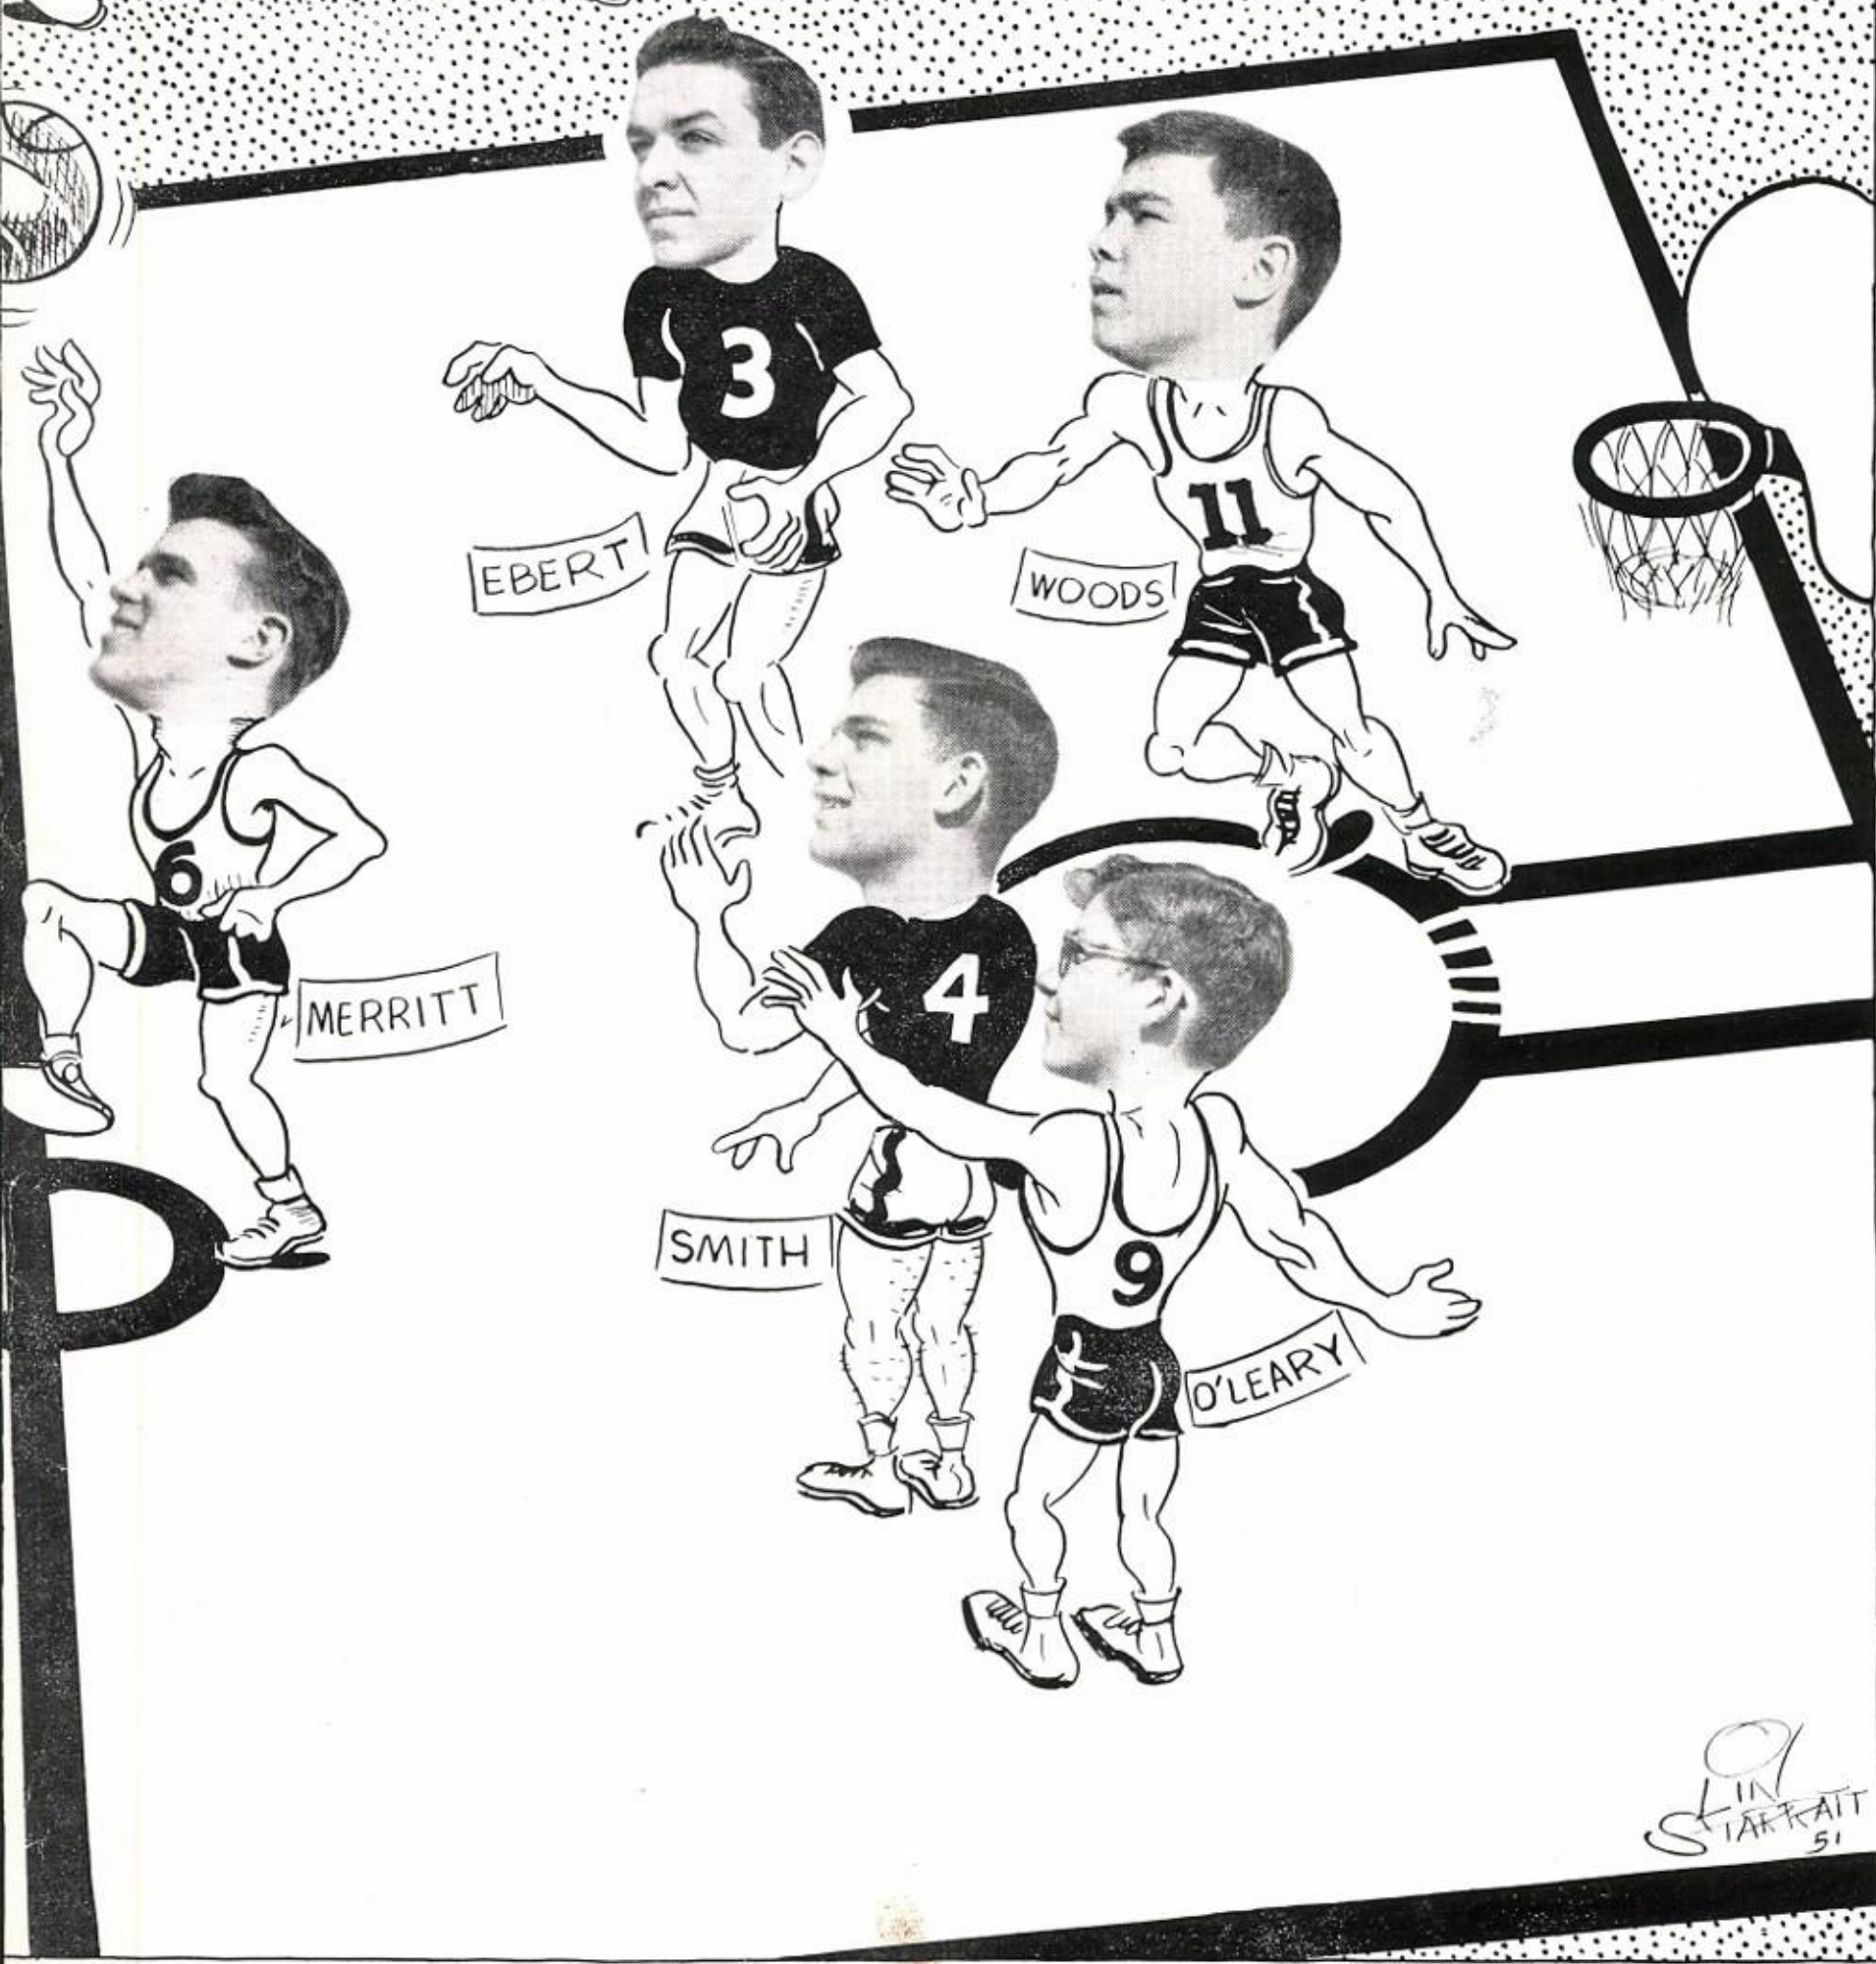

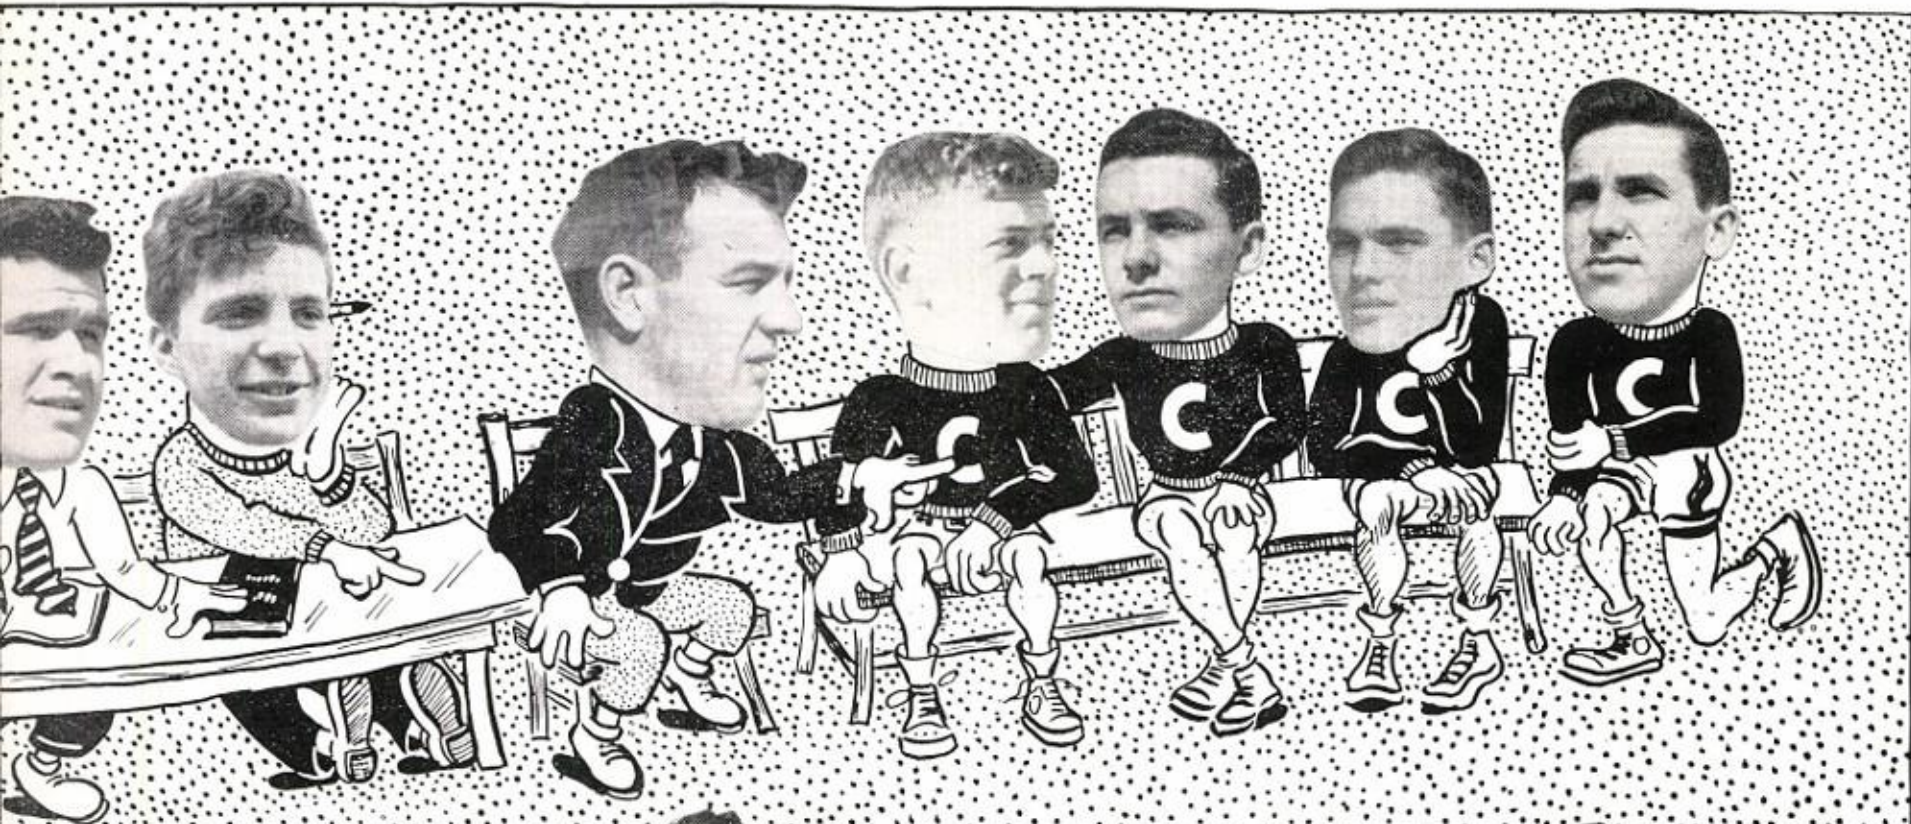

The team was generally made up of inexperienced players, with only two lettermen back from last year, Captain Dick Kelley and Jim Gammon, both linemen.

The Lions' last chance to break into the win column came when they met Bar Harbor for the final game of the season; the Seaside also had failed to win a game. The battle was a hard fought contest; and when it ended, two very tired football teams headed for the locker rooms. There were smiles on some of their faces; something not very common to see after a game. The game ended in a 13-13 tie. Monty Littlefield, our quarterback, scored one touchdown; Pete Doak, our freshman fullback, scored the other. Roger Smith snagged a pass from Littlefield for the extra point.

Harold Meserve was chosen on the second string of the All Conference Team. He led the Conference in punting with an average of 56.4 yards per boot.

VARSITY CHEERLEADERS

Crosby High School! rah! rah! rah! Our cheerleaders have done a good job cheering for old Crosby. The head cheerleader was Gail Jones assisted by Marion Tucker, Annette Paige, Ann Nixon, Sandra Wadlin, Anita Robertson with Sue Wilke, Clorinda Higgins as substitutes.

We appreciate Pat Perry's great job in leading us while Gail was unable to cheer.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The varsity girls should rate a star
The very best season for them so far.
They've beaten three games with more to go;

They'll make the headlines light up and glow.

"Charlie", the mascot, says it's due to him
That made the girls wake up and win.

JUNIOR VARSITY CHEERLEADERS

The J. V. cheerleaders this year have added zip to all the J. V. games. They have learned new cheers and delivered them with such vigor that they led the J. V.'s to many victories. The head cheerleader was Cynthia Paul with Pat Nixon, Beverly Gould, Beverly Patterson, Helen Greenlaw, Marilyn Roberts, and Virginia Munson supporting her.

FRESHMEN

Coach Robert Hall with the assistance of Morty Littlefield, whipped together one of the best freshmen teams which Crosby has seen in the last few years.

Nate Carr and David Johnson were the leading scorers for the season. The remainder of the team were rounded out with: Larry Evans, Pete Doak, Ken Nickerson, Carl Roberts, Ken Drinkwater and Donald Dodge.

JUNIOR HIGH

The Junior High team has been undefeated for the last two years. Coach Norman Mansur had a lot of good ball players in the Junior High and he really knew how to put together a winning combination.

David Wing was elected honorary captain of the team; Darrell O'Leary was the leading scorer for the season.

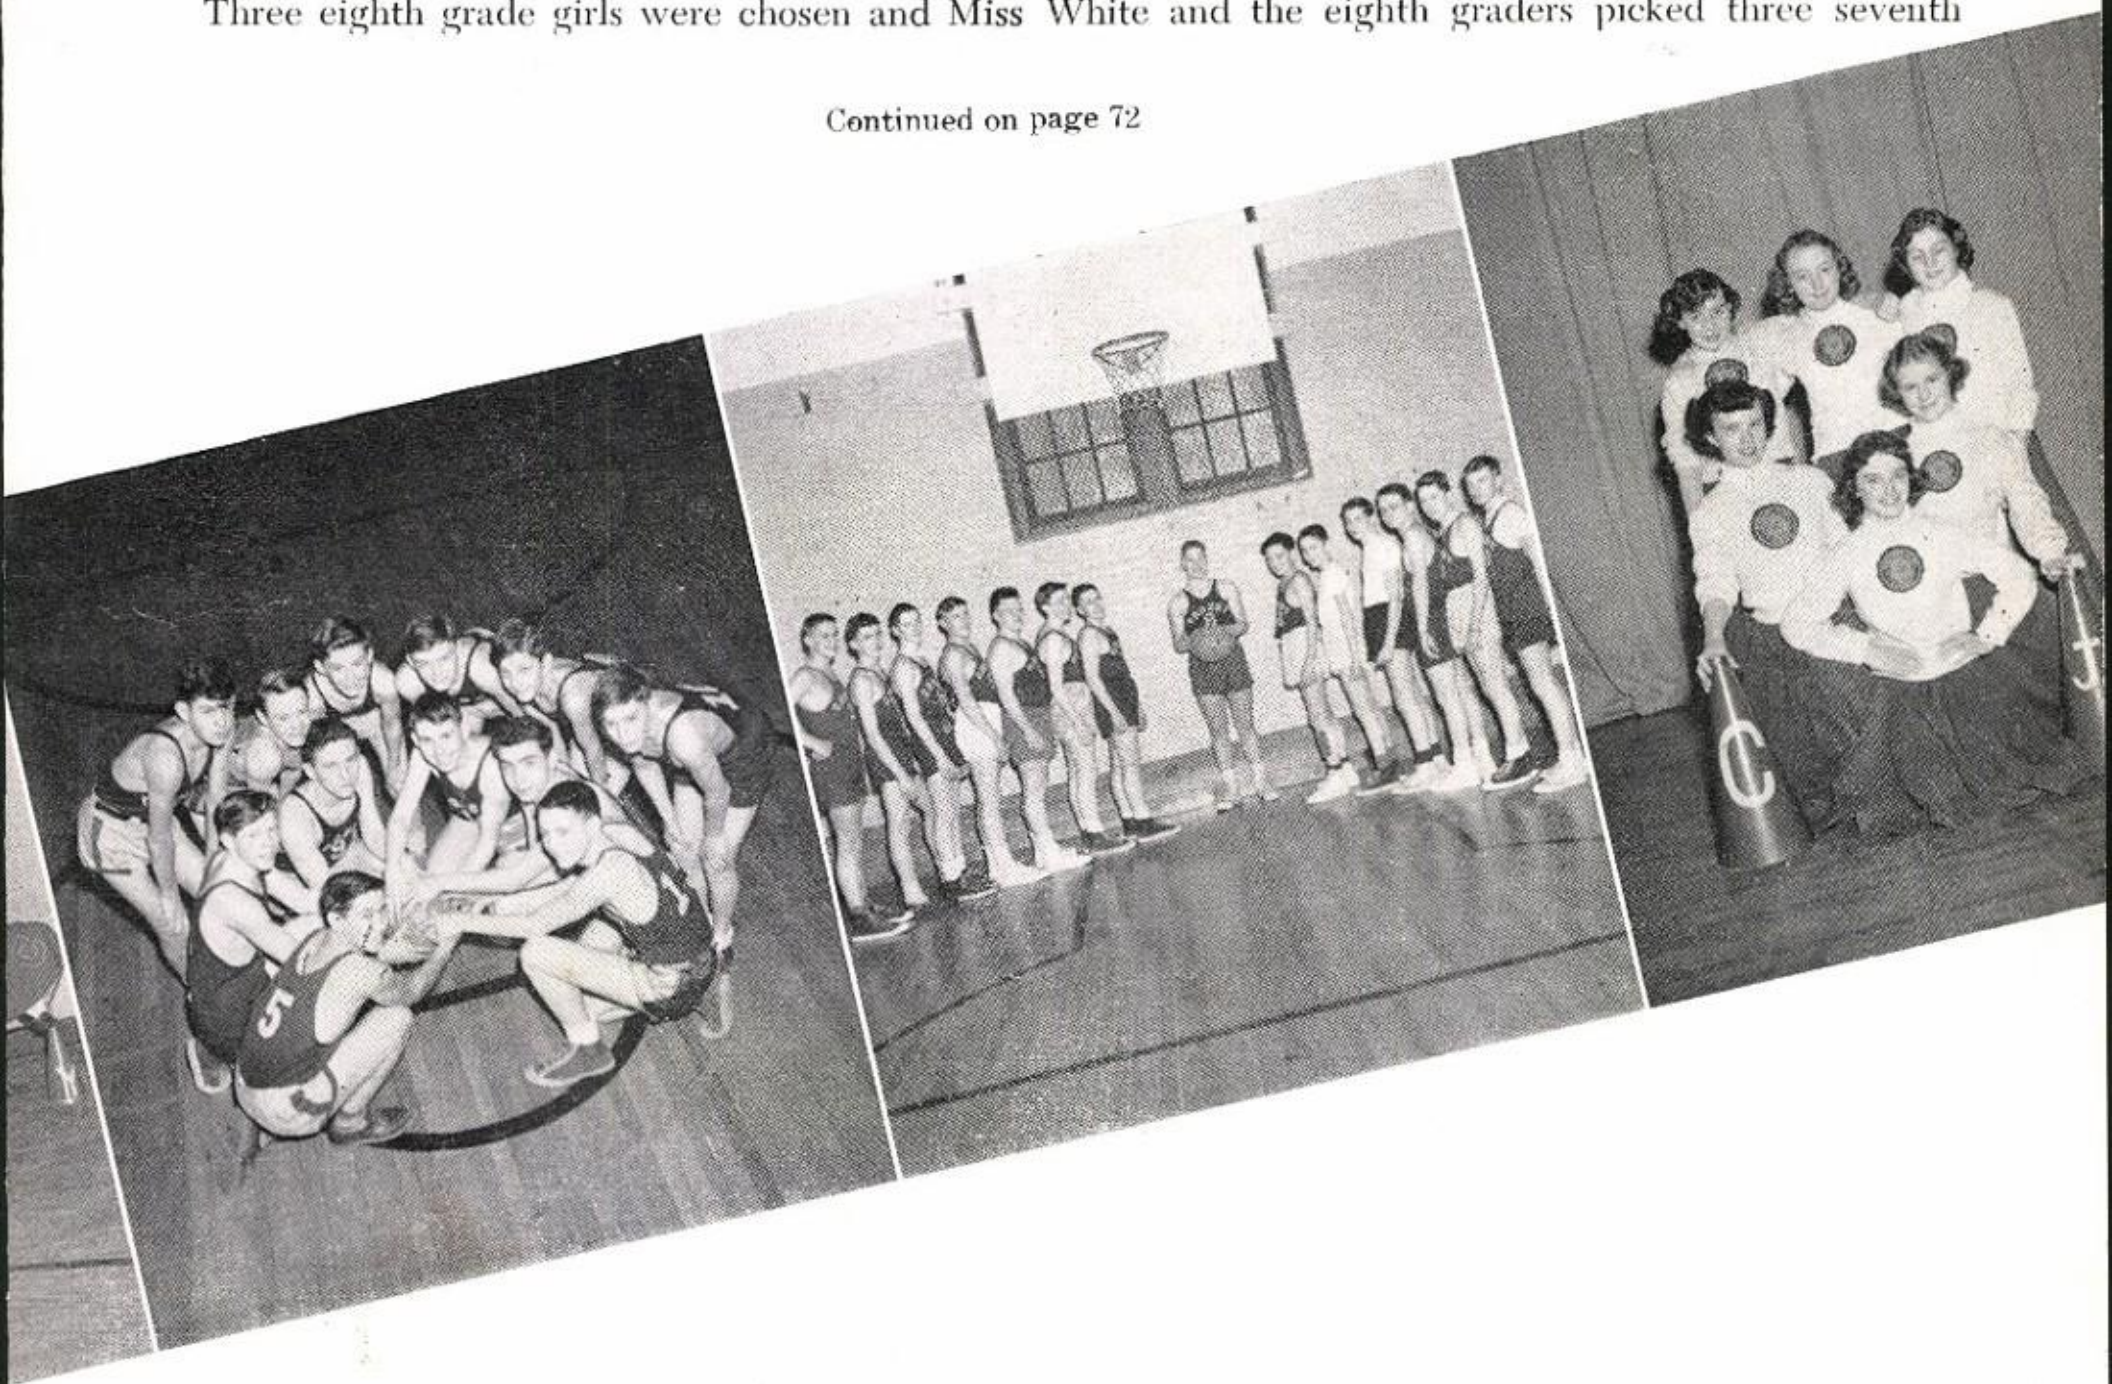

The complete team is as follows: Centers: Darrell O'Leary, Charlie Hall, Bruce Fowles, and Warren Southworth. Forwards: Burt Payson, Dave Blood, Ralph Mosher, Wilbur Birmingham, Fred Drew, and Ed Robertson. Guards: Captain David Wing, Bob Sampson, Berton Smith, Gary Black, Francis Baker, David Bastion and Jimmie Hawley.

JUNIOR HIGH CHEERLEADERS

A new addition to Crosby this year was six peppy junior high cheerleaders which Crosby has not had for about three years.

Three eighth grade girls were chosen and Miss White and the eighth graders picked three seventh

"FIGHT FOR OLD CROSBY"

"PLAY BALL"

Coach Fred Soucy had a big problem. With the first game only two weeks away, he had only two lettermen with which to build a baseball team. Felix Whitney and Monty Littlefield were the starting battery with an all junior infield: Russ Knight, first base; Roger Smith, second base; Ray Ebert, third base; and Keith Grant, shortstop. The outfield was patrolled by John Carr, Les LaFond and David Gaul.

The Soucymen suffered a rather disastrous season losing all four games they played; however, much valuable experience was gained.

This year's team should be much stronger than last year's and we look forward to what should be a highly successful season.

LITERARY

THE SHORT CUT

I knew it the minute I saw her descending the stairs in the Hotel Lindenberg.

It was the year 1946; I had received my honorable discharge from the U. S. Navy just three months ago. I was lucky in landing this job in the Guides of the Alps Association. When they heard I had been born and brought up in the Canadian Rockies, they knew I could guide people through the Alps. At last I was doing what I had always dreamed of doing.

Enough of my background, let's get back to the main subject. She was a young woman in her early thirties, quite tall and extremely beautiful. I must know more about her, I thought as I approached the desk clerk.

"Who is that woman over there at the foot of the stairs?" I asked the clerk.

"She is Shara Lot, wife of Lance Lot, one of those Wall Street tycoons who are here to do a bit of mountain climbing."

"He'll need a good guide and I'm from the G.A.A. I'd appreciate it if you'd put in a word on my behalf."

"Will do," the clerk said as I turned to go to my room.

That night Mr. Lance Lot came to see me at my room and engaged me as his personal guide, after which we talked of various peaks to climb and picked Mount Henshaw for our first. He told me to come to his apartment the following afternoon and we would talk more about supplies needed for the trip.

I arrived about two o'clock to find Mr. Lot out. Being invited to come in and wait for him, I made the most of the situation.

About thirty minutes later Lance entered. He had been making a long distance telephone call to New York. He appeared delighted that I was ready and waiting to plan our trip.

"I hope my wife has made you feel at home," was his first statement.

"Very much so," was my reply.

We talked for quite a while about our trip the next day. I left about four-thirty and returned to my room. I just sat the rest

THE BLESSED EVENT

A brisk December wind whipped down the valley and sent cold chills running through the bearded figure huddled before the small fire. For a long time the man gazed into the dying embers; then abruptly the faint sound of hoofbeats broke the stillness of the night. Scrambling quickly to his feet the man looked hastily toward the pass, then mounted his horse and galloped off into the night.

Sheriff Jed Thurston reined up by the glowing coals of the fire. "This time John Barton won't get away, boys," he roared. "Let's go. If we have to spend Christmas night in the saddle, we are going to get John Barton."

John Barton spurred his horse on through the night, now illuminated by countless twinkling stars.

"Curse this night," he thought. "I'll never shake them now." Looking back he could see the horsemen appear over a ridge. "They have seen me and now my only chance is to make the next ridge and then across the river into Mexico."

"There he is, posse. Let's get him before he makes the river," yelled the sheriff and down they plunged across the plain.

The sharp whine of six-guns broke the stillness of the night as John Barton looked down on the silvery ribbon that meant pursuers. He raced down towards the river.

"Senor, Senor, help me!"

There in the trail blocking his path stood a young and frightened Mexican couple. Instinctively John Barton reined his horse to a halt.

"It's my wife, Senor. She is about to bear a child and I must get her to the village as quickly as possible. Our mule has fallen and broken a leg. Will you help us please?"

John Barton glanced across the river towards freedom and then at the horsemen racing down the slope. He leaped from his horse and ran madly towards the charging horsemen firing wildly.

Across the silent plains three horsemen moved slowly, followed by a man leading a woman on horseback. John Barton, the notorious killer, lay lifeless beside the quiet river and overhead one star twinkled more brightly than all the rest.

THE WORLD IS MINE

Today, upon a bus, I saw
A lovely maid with golden hair.
I envied her, for she seemed so gay,
I wished that I might be as fair;
And then when suddenly she rose to leave,
I saw her hobble down the aisle;
She had one foot and wore a crutch,
But as she passed, she had a smile!
Oh, God, forgive me when I whine —
I have two feet — the world is mine!

And when I stopped to buy some sweets,
The lad who sold them had such charm,
I talked to him — he said to me,
“It’s nice to talk to one like you.
You see,” he meekly said, “I’m blind.”
Oh, God, forgive me when I whine —
I have two eyes — the world is mine!

Then, walking down the street, I saw
A little boy with eyes of blue.
He stood and watched the others play;
It seemed he knew not what to do.
I stopped a moment, and then said,
“Why don’t you join the others, dear?”
He looked ahead without a word,
And then I knew he could not hear.
Oh, God, forgive me when I whine —
I have two ears — the world is mine.

With feet to take me where I go,
With eyes to see the sunset’s glow,
With ears to hear what I would know —
Oh, God, forgive me when I whine —
I’m blessed, indeed. The world is mine!

MYSTERY HOUSE

Mystery House, that’s what people have always called it, for as far back as anyone remembers the house has been filled with horror and everyone has come to fear it.
Once, the most beautiful estate you could ever look upon, it has gradually run down and fallen prey to the worst of storms. One cannot see the house from the road because it is set thickly with many trees and brush.
The rear of the house is situated on a steep cliff which has a drop of about 100 feet onto jagged rocks below. Years ago, there was land all around the house; but the severe storms have worn it away until finally the back end of the house juts out over the cliff.

For years the house has been empty of all occupants. For one reason or another, people who have lived in this house have either died suddenly or have had, in some way or another, ill fortune. No one has ever solved any of the mysteries and, to tell the truth, no one has hardly dared enter upon the grounds of the house. Now, after nearly twenty years, a man has suddenly appeared and has bought the old estate.

Elliot Kimball was a rich man, not that one would know it from the way he looked and dressed, but then he always did have the name of being a miser. That really isn’t the word for it, because he was never known to give a dime to anyone without first taking it out of his hide. So, it was a great surprise to the people that a man of this nature would want to buy the house.
The only reason he gave for wanting it was that his doctor had ordered him to have complete rest from everything and everyone, and in truth that was the one place almost everyone would be glad to leave alone.

So Elliot Kimball had come to this condemned house accompanied by his doctor,
Paul Stewart, who felt it necessary to be with him because Elliot Kimball had a weak heart and needed constant care.
Along with the doctor, Elliot had also brought his life earnings. Being a miserly man he was very distrustful of banks and so carried his money wherever he went.

On Melvin's seventeenth birthday his mother realized that he would probably start smoking soon.

"Promise you'll tell me yourself," she begged, "instead of letting me hear it from the neighbors."

"Don't worry about me, Mom," he said. "I quit smoking a year ago."

Norma B.: "You can't trust a man two inches away from you!"

Barbara J.: "You can't trust most of them that close!"

"Beg your pardon, but what is your name, Sir?" the hotel clerk asked.

"Name!" echoed J. C., who had just signed the register, "Don't you see my signature there?"

"Of course," answered the clerk. "That's what aroused my curiosity."

BEAUTY CONTEST

"That old hussy — just look at her strut," she muttered. "Honestly, you'd think the judges would have more sense than to fall for that silly giggle."

Still grumbling, Lucy glanced around at the other contestants. She was the best looking — why none of the others even had naturally curly hair! Humph!

The last remark was uttered in complete contempt for the way one judge was craning his neck to see "that hussy's" legs. He didn't have to make such a to do about it — but then, he hadn't seen her yet, so she couldn't blame him.

"Come on, kid, step right up," hollered the judge. "Kid — what was this, a baby show?" she thought scornfully. Forcing a pleasant expression, she moved her hips slowly, as though swaying to unheard music. "That's perking them up," she gloated, "— look at them gape."

After she had made her way over to the group who, as she, had already had their turn, she turned to watch the rest of the entries.

Ahh, it was over. A huge sigh of relief went up from the crowd, now they would choose a winner. Here comes the judge — strike a pose, — that's right — why . . . of all the nerve, he walked right by.

"They're crooked anyway, I could tell it from the start," she whispered to her neighbor munching hay; and then added, "a goat's life isn't a happy one."

VARSIITY

The Lions opened the season at the Armory against Bucksport's "Golden Bucks". The starting lineup had Mark Kapiloff at center; Les LaFond and Ray Ebert, forwards; and Don Greenlaw and Roger Smith in the guard slots. The Lions dropped the first game but bounced back to beat a strong Husson College Jayvee team 51-50.

After losing several games, Coach Soucy decided it was time to make some changes. Terry Horne, a freshman, was brought up from the Jayvees and inserted at the center post. Mark Kapiloff and Ray Ebert held down the forwards assignments; Don Greenlaw and Henry Gurney took care of the back court chores. After dropping a couple of close games, this combination finally began to click. They went on to beat a good Sumner High team but lost to Blue Hill by one point.

On their next outing the Lions ran all over the Husson Jayvees, beating them by a considerable margin. The Lions wound up the season with a loss to the Hampden "Broncos".

Ray Ebert was outstanding all season with his rebounding. Les LaFond, Terry Horne and Mark Kapiloff carried the burden of the scoring but they received some help from Ray Ebert, Henry Gurney, Don Greenlaw, Ray Shibles, Roger Smith, and Keith Grant.

We wish next year's team all the luck in the world and hope they have a more successful season.

GLEE CLUB

Music night at Crosby was held in the auditorium on March 20 with the Band, Orchestra, and Glee Club performing.

Five people were chosen this year to represent Crosby at the State Festival at Augusta on March 25 to 28. They were: Edward Wortman, Dennis Huntington, David Gaul, Nancy Vaughan and Patricia Perry.

The Band, Orchestra and a selected chorus attended the Eastern Maine School Music Festival held on May 16 at Skowhegan.

ORCHESTRA

Often times overlooked, the Crosby High School orchestra plays a tremendous part in plays, assemblies, the annual concert and other special events. Many hours have been spent in preparing material to be presented at these times. Without the conscientious work of our director, Mr. Lewis, the orchestra would be unable to function.

BAND

The Crosby Band may be small in number; but as far as participation is concerned, we can be proud of a good standing. Many sacrifices have been made in the past year so that our athletic games would not go without music. Through the able leadership of Mr. Donald Lewis it has been possible for us to serve our school.

MAJORETTES

The Majorettes that you have seen stepping lively at all the games and at parades will graduate this year. Due to this fact a large number of eighth grade, freshmen, and sophomore girls who are interested in becoming majorettes are being trained to take over this duty. Six girls from this group will be chosen by teachers to lead the band; the rest will act as substitutes by forming a majorette club. It is hoped that these girls will be ready to show their strutting at the Eastern Maine Music Festival.

of the afternoon and meditated on a plan to eliminate Mr. Lot, permanently.

On Tuesday we started up the slope of Mount Henshaw. By then I had figured out a plan to get rid of Mr. Lot with no one the wiser. About noon we stopped to rest on a huge ledge overlooking the valley.

"Do you think we will make the top before nightfall?" came Lance's first query since the start of the trip.

"No," I responded, "We will have to camp on a ledge about five hundred feet from the top. From there it is straight up. We should reach the ledge in about three hours."

"Is there no shorter way to the ledge?"

"There is, but it is too dangerous for the inexperienced."

"Let's break-out the supplies and have something to eat," I suggested after a long pause.

He kept questioning me all through lunch about the short cut.

It took us longer than I had expected to reach the ledge; and by the time we had pitched the tent, it was as dark as the ace of spades. I left the tent to bring in the supplies. Everything was working out perfectly. According to my prearranged plan I secured a good hiding place; then, stepping to the edge of the ledge, I sucked in a deep breath and gave forth with a blood curdling yell.

I had no sooner reached my place of hiding than Lance came bursting out of the tent. He rushed to the edge and looked into the dark abyss. Turning he said to himself, "I must find him, he may be still alive."

On my way down the next morning I found him a pool of dried blood.

My plan had worked perfectly, yet when I reached the hotel, I was told that Shara had been killed by a chandelier which had fallen on top of her.

It all seems strange as I look back on it, for Lance wasn't killed by a fall. He was killed by a boulder which I had sent after him!

THE MEETING

In the north woods of Maine in a little town of Pearl, two close friends lived; one in the neighboring country about two miles from town, the other about one mile from town, in the same direction. The town was small, population about 250, with dirt streets and wooden sidewalks. It was in the year 1898, November 7, that these two hunters started out on a journey that was to end exactly opposite of what was planned.

We shall call them Tom Jones and Jim Davis. At five o'clock in the morning Tom Jones, who lived closer to town, got out of bed and started breakfast. He lived alone in a one room cabin. At five-thirty he was through work. He went to the barn in back of the cabin, saddled his rangey strawberry roan, packed his gear and returned to the house for his Winchester rifle and Colt revolver. He took down from the wall the long barreled 38-55 and laid it on the table. The heavy 45 he strapped around his waist. It was cold, he thought to himself, as he returned to his horse and mounted. He sat well in the saddle, a 190-pound, six-foot, dark-haired man with blue eyes. He turned around for a last look, then wheeled his horse in the direction of Davis's house.

Jim Davis was adjusting his pack on his horse, a black stallion standing a good eleven hands high. "Hello Tom," he called back. "Ready?"

"Just a minute while I fetch my guns." He was back in a few minutes with a 45 Colt and a 30-30 Winchester 94 rifle.

"Let's go," Davis said as he mounted the stallion. Davis also sat well in the saddle, his features and stature resembling those of his friend, although he was light-haired.

All day they rode through the pine forest. That night as they camped near a brook and were just finishing their meal, Jones spoke.

"You know, Jim, I was just thinking. What if Chief Gray Eagle doesn't meet us at the St. Lawrence? How do we know he won't just be getting even? He still hates the white man, you know."

"You worry too much, Tom. He'll be there." Nothing more was said.

About one o'clock the next morning the crack of a rifle echoed through the pines, then two more. The two men rolled out of their blankets and, grabbing their rifles, jumped out of the circle of light. Presently a scream was heard.

"Listen, Jim, wolves are after someone." Hurriedly, they saddled up and rode off in that direction.

Neither man spoke. They both knew the chance of riding into a wolf pack but a human life was in danger. Two more shots led them to the pack. They opened up with their Winchester. The crack of the rifles and the heavy roar of the Colts broke up the pack and there the remains of a man and his dog lay mangled in the snow.

"Traveling alone, foolish thing to do."

"Yeah, they always learn, but it's usually too late."

After they buried him in the snow, they returned to their camp. It was now 2:30. Jones threw more wood on the fire, checked his rifle and revolver as Davis did, and they both returned to bed. Neither slept well remembering the sight.

Next morning they broke camp and started out again. At noon it was colder and it had started to snow. They decided to camp early so they wouldn't be caught in the open if a blizzard struck. They built a lean-to, unsaddled the horses and placed blankets over them. About two o'clock it came. It hit swiftly and hard, burying the lean-to and occupants in it. Two-thirty came and went, then three. At four, all was still except the horses nervously moving around and shaking from mane and tail.

Davis crawled out and looked around. "Guess she's all over," he called back.

"Yeah," said Jones.

DIARY OF A FRESHMAN

Dear Diary,

Am I ever glad to be home and in my own safe bed! I had a horrible time today. First of all my grain sack didn't fit and I held my breath all day for fear the shoulders would slip, and they wouldn't even let us wear blouses under 'em. Oh, I was never so mortified in my life when Johnny saw me without any lipstick. I must have looked like a ghost. But then I guess he had enough on to make up for it anyhow. And oh, Diary if only you could have seen those short pants and dangling earrings on him, it sure was funny; but I didn't dare laugh 'cause I was afraid he might get mad at me.

That was the easy part of the day, except that I had to stay after school for Mr. Mansur because I was late to class. I had to carry Maurice Littlefield's books to class for him. Tonite at the reception. Oh! I can't write about it, the stunt was so embarrassing to me, everybody laughed! I did have a pretty good time at the dance afterwards and Johnny held my hand coming home. Oh, yes! Ma got mad at me tonite. She dropped her spoon on the floor and asked me to pick it up for her. I just couldn't bend and did I get a talking to, all about this stuff of being a help to parents; but if she only knew how many times I'd touched my nose to the ground for those old Seniors, I'm sure she'd forgive me. I just can't wait 'til I'm a Senior. What I won't do to those Freshmen. Oh, well, Goodnite Diary.

STUDY PERIOD

(In which I try to do some studying, but my rambling thoughts interfere.)

I think I'll get some studying done,
I have a period free;
I'll get my lessons—every one
How sensible of me!

Now let me see—in Biology
I think 'twas on page eight
(It surely is a mystery
Why that girl's always late!)

(Oh, well, that's no affair of mine,
Although it's sure a sin;
Oh, me, it must be after nine!)
Now, where shall I begin?

Oh, here's the place—Pasteur found
A "new bug"—fancy that,
That story is known the round,
(I need an Easter hat).

(My last year's coat will have to do
I'd like a dress of lace;
I really should have something new)
Oh, heck, I've lost my place.

Oh, I don't care. This is so dry;
I'll study English, I guess.
(For school, those heels are much too high
And ain't her hair a mess!)

This exercise we have to write
And gosh, it sure is long!
(I hear the love birds had a fight
I wonder what was wrong).

I can't do this—I have no ink
Except a bottle of red;
What shall I do? Oh well, I think
I'll study "math" instead.

Now, what's become of my "math" book?

We'll give his some credit, that's for sure,
But the team as a whole deserves much more.

Barb and her scorebook go hand in hand;
This manager's job maybe ain't so grand.
She listens to gripes from coach and the team,

"You missed some points, you're way off
the beam."

With tangerines and gum, Janice is there to keep food for themouth and gum from the hair.

Compared to any, we've sure got the best;
We'll take our managers ahead of the rest.

We trounced the Bucks and beat CYO;
The team is tops, it goes to show.

With hot-shot Knight and the points she gets,

She's this year's high-scorer for the Lion-ettes.

With a hook-shot artist like our Joan Brown
We'll show the rest—we'll go to town.

With sharp little forwards like Mooers and Flowers

The rest of the games should well be ours.

And Hart and Higgins we sha'n't forget
And we've many others to mention yet.

Our fast little Polly deserves a cheer;
She's just a newcomer to the team this year.

She's a terrific worker and can handle that ball;

But that much credit, we can give them all.

Those are our forwards, the best in sight
And so much more would be easy to write.

And Captain Woodbury sure rates an A
A number one guard all the way.

With zone or man it's easy to see

That Sally is tops, you'll all agree.

Easy-going Pat is great on the floor

With those three in, we couldn't want more.

But more we've got, with Ginny so tall

She stops them dead in any hall.

grades. Nancy Grady, Geary Perry, and Sharon Winter were the eighth graders and Marjorie Roberts, Gail Foss and Ellen Maddocks were the seventh graders. The substitutes were Gail Smith and Marilyn Patterson. Nancy Grady was chosen as their leader.

At the first meeting the uniforms were discussed and it was decided that blue corduroy skirts and white turtleneck sweaters would look neat. These were to be furnished by the girls themselves and by the first game each had her own uniform.

Being a new experience to the girls, they did a wonderful job. They were at every game backing the team, which was undefeated.

JAYVEE BASKETBALL

The Jayvees, under the careful guidance of Coach Neil Soule, had a very successful season. The boys won twelve games, losing only two. Eddie Woods, Harold Meservy and Basil O'Leary led the team in scoring. Al Merritt and Paul Dudley were the other members of the starting five.

The Jayvees played a number of thrilling games, winning several by only one or two points.

The remainder of the team consisted of Eddie Wortman, John Wescott, Tommie Stephenson, Dennie Huntington, Garv Woods, Robert Downs, Robert Howard, Richard Small, and Dick White.

The snow had drifted high in places and in others the ground was nearly bare. A doe came walking along and Davis quickly dropped it. "Fresh meat," he called to Jones, who was tending the horses. "Bring the horses over here, Tom, the wind has blown the ground bare and there's a patch of dead grass they can feed on."

The next morning they started out again. "We ought to be there by nightfall," Jones said. "Look, Jim, I'm worried. I don't trust that Injun. He'd cut your throat for the fun of it. How do we know he'll be there with them furs to sell?"

"We'll find out tonight," Davis said.

The morning dragged by. They ate off the fresh deer meat; then they started out again. About four o'clock Jones shouted, "St. Lawrence River's just ahead." They both stopped. All was silent ahead; not a sign of life could be seen.

"Look, Jim, no one's around. I don't like it. I don't like it at all."

Straight ahead was the Saint Lawrence. To their left and about a hundred yards away was a trapper's cabin, unused for some time. "What'll we do, Jim?"

"I don't know. Chief Gray Eagle said he'd be here waiting for us."

Jones stared a minute, then spoke slowly as in a trance. "Don't you get it, Jim?" He's here all right waiting for us to get in that open spot so he can get a shot at us. He and his braves. We've traveled through their lines. We're surrounded."

"Pull yourself together. He wouldn't do . . ."

He was cut off by the sound of a rifle. The bullet flew past his ear.

"Make tracks for that cabin," he shouted. They covered the hundred yards in a few seconds and flung themselves in the cabin.

Elliot Kimball was a man that few people like. He had no relations except for a nephew, George Kimball, whom he thought was the exact opposite of himself, a spendthrift. The only other person with whom he was well acquainted was a former business partner, John Ashley, of whom he was none too fond either. They had once been in business together but later had become jealous of one another. Finally Elliot had pushed his partner out of the business and since that time they had been constant rivals.

It was, indeed, a great displeasure to Elliot Kimball when about a month after he had moved into the old house, he found himself surrounded by both his nephew and former business partner. The reasons for this being that the nephew, the spendthrift that he was, had run out of money and, of course, ran to his rich uncle to replenish his supply, although by now he should have known that it took more than asking to get something from Elliot Kimball. John Ashley too, had come to see him on matters concerning money. It seemed that Elliot owed his partner a considerable sum of money from a past business deal. Mr. Ashley, who had since been unlucky in business, had decided to collect the money due him.

John Ashley found out where Elliot was from his nephew, so they had driven up together. When Elliot saw them both coming to the house, he was very angry and even more so when he heard the reasons for which they were there. Both George Kimball and John Ashley were very angry too and even went so far as to threaten him if they did not receive the money they wanted.

However, he paid no heed to their threats, though perhaps it would have been better if he had done so.

At the exact hour of 10:00 two shots were fired and a body slumped to the floor, the body of Elliot Kimball. Yes, he was murdered. Perhaps for his money.

The next morning the police were called.

"What's getting into the red devil, anyhow?" Davis said.

"I had a hunch something was wrong all along," said Jones. "I'll tell you why. I killed his son four years ago in a knife fight. He didn't know at the time who did it, but he must have found out somehow. That's why he sent for me to come and get these skins. His son challenged me to fight one day when he was full of liquor.

I tried to reason with him but he called me a coward, so we fought and I killed him."

"Yeah, and now he's having his revenge," Jim said.

A number of shots crashed into the cabin. The horses whinnied, then ran off.

"What are we gonna do, Jim? Them Injuns ran our horses off with all our grub?"

"If we can hold them off till dark, we're o.k. They won't fight at night. Then maybe we can get out of here."

At five o'clock it was dark. The Indians stopped shouting. At ten o'clock all was quiet. Tom spoke.

"Let's see if we can't get out of here."

Cautiously he crept to the door and opened it; then jumped aside. An instant later a rifle barked and the bullet thudded into the cabin wall opposite them.

"Maybe they don't fight at night but they sure keep watch. How many shells you got?"

"Twenty rounds, how many have you?"
"Fifteen."

All night they watched and waited for the dawn that would bring Gray Eagle and his braves. At last dawn came and with it the Indians, only this time they had fire arrows which were more effective at times than bullets. The first one landed on the roof and was quickly put out by the snow

The murder had them completely baffled. There were no clues found anywhere in the house, still the three suspects were booked for suspicion. No evidence was turned up against them, and they were finally freed. Now they were safe, no one would ever find out who the murderer was.

They returned to the house on a dark stormy night. They didn't really realize how stormy it was, so eager were they to get their hands on the money. The house was none too strong on a fair day but on a stormy night it was very dangerous. The three men were so busy counting the money that they were unprepared for the coming events. With one final slash of wind and rain the house, which had for so many years set on the edge of the cliff, fell.

Yes, it was the perfect crime and the money was all theirs. Too bad they didn't live to enjoy it.

"What's wrong, Henry?" asked his wife.

"My razor," boomed the voice within the bathroom. "It doesn't cut at all."

"Don't be silly, your beard can't be tougher than the linoleum!"

"Do I really need brushing off?" asked the passenger in the Pullman.

"Does you!" exclaimed the porter with great emphasis, "Boss, I'm broke."

Pat Nixon: My face is my fortune.

Lee O.: Well, never mind that. The richest people aren't always the happiest.

there, but some of them landed in the walls.

Jim said, "I'm going out and try to put that fire out before it spreads."

"Don't be a fool, Jim. You'll never make it."

Davis, crazed by the sight, emptied his Winchester into the charging Indians and rushing outside, he grabbed up Davis's Colt and fired the heavy revolvers until they were empty. Then he swayed back and forth and fell in a heap. The Indian Chief had had his revenge.

What can you expect from a day that begins with getting up in the morning?

Strategy is when you're out of ammunition but keep right on firing so that the enemy won't know.
